RICHARD SERRA

Richard Serra was born November 2, 1939, in San Francisco. While working in steel mills to support himself, Serra attended the University of California at Berkeley and Santa Barbara from 1957 to 1961, receiving a B.A. in English literature. He then studied at Yale University, New Haven, from 1961 to 1964, completing his B.F.A. and M.F.A. Serra trained as a painter at Yale, where he worked with Josef Albers on his book The Interaction of Color (1963). During the early 1960s, he came into contact with Philip Guston, Robert Rauschenberg, Ad Reinhardt, and Frank Stella. In 1964 and 1965, Serra traveled to Paris on a Yale Traveling Fellowship, where he frequently visited the reconstruction of Constantin Brancusi's studio at the Musée National d'Art Moderne. He spent much of the following year in Florence on a Fulbright grant, and traveled throughout southern Europe and northern Africa. The young artist was given his first solo exhibition at Galleria La Salita, Rome, in 1966.

In 1966, Serra made his first sculptures out of nontraditional materials such as fiberglass and rubber. From 1968 to 1970, he executed a series of Splash pieces, in which molten lead was splashed or cast into the junctures between floor and wall. Serra had his first United States solo exhibition in 1969 at the Leo Castelli Warehouse, New York, and also was included in Nine Young Artists: Theodoron Awards at the Solomon R. Guggenheim Museum, New York. Also by 1969, he had begun his Prop series, whose parts are not welded together or otherwise attached but are balanced solely by forces of weight and gravity. He produced the first of his short films in 1968 and in the 1970s experimented with video. The Pasadena Art Museum organized a solo exhibition of Serra's work in 1970, and in the same year he received a Guggenheim Memorial Foundation fellowship. That year, he helped Smithsonian execute Spiral Jetty at Great Salt Lake in Utah. Serra, however, was less intrigued by the vast American landscape than by urban sites, and in 1970 he installed placed one of his earliest public works at 183rd and Webster in the Bronx. He received the Skowhegan Medal for Sculpture in 1975 and traveled to Spain to study Mozarabic architecture in 1982.

Serra first collaborated with Gemini G.E.L. in 1972, and has printed almost exclusively with the Los-Angeles based workshop since then.

Serra was honored with solo exhibitions at the Kunsthalle Tübingen, Germany, in 1978; the Musée National d'Art Moderne, Paris, in 1984; the Museum Haus Lange, Krefeld, Germany, in 1985; and the Museum of Modern Art, New York, in 1986. The 1990s saw further honors for Serra's work: a retrospective of his drawings at the Bonnefantenmuseum, Maastricht; the Wilhelm Lehmbruck prize for sculpture in Duisburg in 1991; and the following year, a retrospective at Museo Nacional Centro de Arte Reina Sofía, Madrid. In 1997–98, his Torqued Ellipses (1997) were exhibited at MoCA Los Angeles and the Dia Center for the Arts, New York. Since 2000, Serra has created major installations of his sculpture internationally, including The Matter of Time at the Guggenheim Museum Bilbao, Spain – an installation of record-breaking size and duration – and Promenade at the Grand Palais in Paris (2008). In 2007, the Museum of Modern Art in New York presented a Serra career retrospective, which was the museum's largest-ever sculpture exhibition to date. Serra continues to produce large-scale commissioned works for sites both in the United States and abroad.

Serra and his wife, Clara Weyergraf-Serra, live New York and Nova Scotia.
